

Panel Discussion

Gender and Sexuality in Migration Research

Studying Gender and Sexuality in Transnational Migration: Where Are We Getting At?

July 13
18:00-19:30
Room 10-301

Dr. An Huy Tran

Dr. An Huy Tran is a Postdoctoral Researcher at the Faculty of Sociology, Bielefeld University. He received a Ph.D. from the University of Duisburg-Essen with a research project on the intersection between transnational migration, sexualities, and masculinities among male Vietnamese migrants in contemporary Japan.

"Where should I go from here?" - intersectionality, assemblage, and stories of trans migrants from China

Dr. Xinyu Promio Wang

Dr. Xinyu Promio Wang (they/she) is Project Assistant Professor at Tokyo College, UTIAS, The University of Tokyo. Their research concerns digital media, minorities (especially trans women) and identities, and they are interested with intersections of queer, mobility, national and transnational identities in the context of globalisation and digitalisation.

Transnational and Transgender Identity Making among Japanese Americans

Yu Noguchi

Yu Noguchi (they/them) is currently a second year master's student in the Graduate Program in Global Studies, Sophia University. They did their undergraduate degree at the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa double majoring in Psychology and Women's Studies. Their current research focuses on identity negotiation in transgender and transnational Japanese Americans.

Sponsored by Sophia University Graduate
Program of Global Studies

Supported by Sophia University Institute of Comparative Culture

Follow us to stay up to date with our activities!

